

STARS LIGHT UP DUBAI Singer Kylie Minogue couldn't believe her eyes when she arrived in Dubai to perform at the extravagant opening of the new $1.5 billion Atlantis, The Palm. "It's quite surreal," she said. "It's staggering. I guess more is more here and they have done a great job. My room's very nice. The aquarium is mind-blowing." Kylie didn't get the $35,000-a-night Bridge Suite, which was reserved for Oprah Winfrey. But when the queen of talk couldn't make the $20 million, three-day event, the suite went to Bollywood star Shahrukh Khan, known as the Tom Cruise of India and nicknamed King Khan. "I personally do believe this is the finest, finest hotel I have ever visited in my life," said Khan, who had brought his family to the hotel a month before the grand opening. Lindsay Lohan and Charlize Theron stayed in three-story, $15,000-a-night Lost Chambers Suites, both which offer mesmerizing views from the master bedroom to the Ambassador Lagoon and its 65,000 sharks, rays and fish. "Atlantis, The Palm is a beautiful place to see oceanic wildlife up front and in person," Mischa Barton said. "But if that is not your thing you can also just go hang out at the beach. It really offers everyone something." KEEPING UP WITH A CELEBUTANTE

Kim Kardashian has a new spot in Miami Beach to show off the moves she displayed on Dancing with the Stars now that the legendary Fontainebleau has reopened (following a $1 billion facelift). "It has the best food, shops and nightclub," she raved. With the NFL on break, she and her beau Reggie Bush of the New Orleans Saints are ready to travel together. "Last year Reggie and I vacationed in Italy, which was a dream come true. This year we'd love to go to South Africa! We have never been there before and heard it's amazing." IBIZA ISN'T JUST FOR PARTYING Model Mark Vanderloo, the face of DKNY men's clothing and fragrance, has been a regular on Ibiza since 1994. For a while he was content to rent a home. "After doing that for several years, I said this is getting kind of ridiculous," said Vanderloo, who bought several houses on the island. It makes life easier for when his two children accompany him. "They need to have their toys somewhere and it sure beats traveling with five suitcases."
