

GLITTERATI ON THE GO

BY KELLY CARTER

WHATEVER SHARON WANTS Sharon Stone received an unexpected birthday gift while staying at the SLS Hotel in Beverly Hills. After celebrating her special day with dinner at The Bazaar by José Andrés within the hotel, she strolled over to Moss, the hotel's museum-like shop-without-walls. With a cocktail in hand, she perused the vitrines holding exclusive Camper shoes, retro-bicycles and cocktail rings. But she zeroed in on a fedora on a shelf. Too bad the hat wasn't for sale. But that didn't stop Moss from working out something as a birthday gift for the actress.

THE UN-HOLLYWOOD GETAWAY Long before she became Brenda Walsh on Beverly Hills, 90210, actress Shannen Doherty found the perfect escape from Hollywood. Every year she heads to Costa Careyes on the Mexican Pacific. "It's amazing," she cooed. "It's like being in the jungles of Mexico. I love it. I rent a villa and also stay at the Hotel Careyes." She says she started going there 20 years ago but can't recall who first told her about the piece of paradise. "It was one of those things where I wanted some place remote, that's not Hollywood, that won't be in magazines as the place to travel. It's off the grid. Somebody directed me towards Costa Careyes and I've been in love with it ever since. I go back all of the time." Not surprisingly, the regular has become friends with Gian Franco Brignone, the founder of the exclusive resort that attracts the international jet set. "Gian Franco owns a restaurant called Polo. It's on the polo fields. I eat and I sit in the sun. That's what I do at Costa Careyes."

PRESIDENTIAL DETAIL President Barack Obama is known for being a fitness aficionado and loving to mingle with the masses. Therefore it should come as no surprise that when he stayed in the palatial, 22,000-square-foot Marc Antony and Cleopatra Suite at Caesars Palace Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, he opted not to work out in the suite's private fitness area but to go to the hotel's 50,000-square-foot spa to work up a sweat. He also took a trip to the basement to shake hands with the room service staff.
